I’ve never cared much for facts. In an election year “facts” become horribly distorted by politicians hoping to capitalize on the fears of the electorate. Facts can be so cumbersome and argumentative so I’m going to stick to my own opinions and let the reader decide if those opinions fit the facts.

Minnesotans will be voting on two constitutional amendments this November. One would require everyone to have a voter ID in order to vote. Proponents say it will reduce voter fraud. Opponents claim it will disenfranchise voters like the elderly, people with disabilities, military personnel and students. What bothers me though is the complete lack of any plan for implementation. “Trust me,” they say. They don’t want to be encumbered by any facts either. For or against, we have no idea what we are getting ourselves into.

The other amendment would define marriage as a union between one man and one woman. Supporters say marriage is a religious sacrament meant for one man and one woman. There is the obvious question of why is the government involved in marriage at all under separation of church and state. And the other obvious question: If the church is going to control the state then whose religion shall have that privilege.

The obvious questions, however, are not always the important questions. Given the 50% divorce rate and the escalating cost of divorce I’d have to venture that a lot of people have no idea what they are getting themselves into. Maybe that’s the real problem. I wonder if we are trying to fix a problem that doesn’t really exist. Seems like a rather personal choice.

I do know the season of Pride still lingers. Pride has a lot to do with personal choice. I’m talking about that sense of fulfillment and belonging that comes from confidence in the choices we make. We realize that being gay was never a choice. What we choose is to express ourselves openly and freely and establish confidently for ourselves and our community that we are as we were created and we do belong. This is what the GLBT movement has contributed to our culture at large. Pride has shown us the value of individual expression, acceptance, and personal choice. In a diverse culture such as ours personal choice ought to be a given.

Any suggestion that Gay Pride is a fight for rights and social justice refuses to recognize the essence of Pride and the value of individual expression. No doubt, they adopt the alternate view that portrays pride as a sense of supreme arrogance, attempting to deconstruct individual expression using guilt and shame in an effort to construct their own values as a proper model of social conformity. That is the essence of constitutional amendments that seek to restrict the rights of individuals. The illumination of rights and social justice are simply a natural artifact of recognizing diversity. It is a constructive movement attempting to eliminate barriers to individual expression and social evolution created by advocates of rigid social structure, structures that allow them to control the lives of others. Of course it wasn’t always that way. One cannot reasonably proclaim that the Stonewall riot was simply an overly exuberant expression of love and compassion. It is an inevitable response which exaggerates the natural oppression that results from rigid ideals of social conformity.

If pride is the capacity for love and acceptance, then humility is its implementation. As such I acknowledge how much GLBT gained from the women’s rights movement which sought to elevate women’s roles beyond the nuclear family and establish their right to individual expression within the broader context of our culture. The radical feminism that has evolved into today’s women’s movement wasn’t a peace rally either. Indeed, lesbian feminists were battling on two fronts. How can we blame them if we felt they seemed a little bit testy?

What does this have to do with the Twin Cities Men’s Center anyway. TCMC seeks to provide help and services to all men. The advancement of equality really depends on the liberation of men. We need to recognize that men need emotional support. We need to let a man hold a baby without fear that he’s going to drop it. We need to let a man put on a dress and feel sexy when he goes out on Friday night without fear that he’ll forget how to run the jack hammer come Monday morning. Only then do we begin to recognize true equality. Only then do we embrace the idea that masculinity and femininity are both valuable and contribute equally to the strength and value of our culture. They...
Greetings from the Chair

I like to think that TCMC, with its classes, support groups, and presentations, is an excellent place to improve yourself, but you have lots of other choices. There are friends and family, professional options like therapists and psychiatrists, social groups such as softball teams, and of course the voting booth. So whichever path you choose – hang on, the voting booth? Really?

As you may have guessed, it’s no accident I’m mentioning politics in this issue. The upcoming election features a full slate of state and federal races, along with several ballot initiatives. But public opinion of our elected officials is at an all-time low, and voters of all ideological persuasions are disgusted with the current state of affairs. Many people think of voting as at best a pointless waste of time, and at worst a process that validates an out-of-control gang of thugs. So how could voting possibly improve your life?

The simple truth is, elected officials write our laws, and our laws govern how we live. Now far be it for me to tell you how to vote. That would not only be disrespectful, but silly, because what’s best for me is surely different than what’s best for you. But I would like to point out a few issues you might care about, and how the laws that are (or aren’t) written about those issues could change your life.

Are you a man who’s dealt with the family court system in some way? You can bet that if lawmakers started to hear from enough men who felt strongly about some aspect of the family code, things would change.

Are you a gay man who’d like to marry your partner? I think I vaguely recall hearing something about an upcoming vote on this.

What about health issues? Are you worried about paying for medical treatment or qualifying for insurance? Again, this is something that has been, and will continue to be legislated.

There are many more examples, but the point is that whatever issues you need to address on the path to improving yourself, there are almost certainly laws that deal with them. So educate yourself about the issues and candidates, decide what makes the most sense for you, and get out there and VOTE.

are not opposites. They are complements. We need to accept once and for all that holding a baby and running a jack hammer do not demand that one be female and the other be male. We need to fully embrace the idea that masculinity and femininity can be fully embraced by either sex. It is not enough to let our daughters be president; we must also allow our sons to be princesses.

Then again, I’m a transgender woman. I choose to embrace femininity. I express myself openly and freely as a female to establish confidently for myself and my community that I am as I was created and I do belong. What would I know about men?

Oct/Nov 12 1976 - In Our 36th Year of Public Service - 2012
Nearly every Wednesday evening, the Men’s Center is proud to offer a presentation on a wide range of subjects of interest to men as well as to the wider community. This tradition has been part of the Men’s Center offering since it’s founding 35 years ago. These drop-in meetings require no pre-registration, and volunteer experts in the respective subjects conduct them all. Because of our primary mission, all presentations are for men only unless it is otherwise indicated in the individual descriptions.

Please read through these various descriptions to determine which is of interest to you, and consider bringing a friend. This could be an excellent introduction to the Men’s Center for them. Each presentation is intended to foster personal growth and to stimulate interest in the topic.

Our presenters are Richard Arides, Bill Baldwin, Bob Manson, Kelley Lorix, Andy Mickel, Rasheen Tillman, and Amy Running.

A small fee is collected at the door for each person attending:
- Non-Members of TCMC – $5.
- Regular Members ($20 level) – $3
- Sustaining Members – FREE

All presentations meet at The Men’s Center, 3249 Hennepin Ave. So, Suite 55 Minneapolis, MN 55408.

We welcome your suggestions for new topics and presenters. Please call Randy at 612-822-5892 with your ideas.

The Men’s Center does not endorse, take no specific position, nor does it hold any opinion on the presentations, or of any information imparted, or of the presenter(s) themselves. Presentations are the sole product and responsibility of the presenter(s).

This Open Circle enables participants to witness other men practice clarity of self-expression from their hearts rather than their heads. Join us in our 5-round format and ask questions to learn more and even participate yourself if you choose. Our structure is based on the masculine archetypes of King, Warrior, Magician & Lover in Moore and Gilette’s book.

Over 50,000 men have attended Mankind Project experiential weekends for men all over the world to empower men to improve their lives and work together to help other men and families.

Community and Conversation for Men As part of its focus on men’s spirituality, the Benedictine Center in Maplewood will be offering a 4-week series of workshops geared to the needs of men. Called “Men Called to Personal Change,” these morning workshops will be held on Thursdays, from 7:30 to 9 a.m. October 25 through November 15. A freewill offering will be accepted.

Each session will be led by Sam Rahberg, a Benedictine Oblate, spiritual director and director of the Center, who has a masters degree in Theology from Saint John’s in Collegeville. “It’s an opportunity for men to come together and talk about the challenges of living their Christian values in everyday life,” he explains. “We will use insights from the book Change Anything and talk about making changes related to fitness, relationships or other behaviors.”

Each session will also include morning prayer and breakfast. Thank You!
Among Men, an HIV prevention model that is in the final year of funding from The Minnesota Department of Health is proud to be working collaboratively with The Twin Cities Men’s Center (TCMC). Among Men grew from a nearly twenty year history of HIV prevention programming housed in the University of Minnesota School of Public Health; Division of Epidemiology. Began under the name of Man2Man by Dr. B.R. Simon Rosser, the program’s rich history includes hundreds of people whom have worked as facilitators, coordinators and leaders. The program has served thousands of men who have sex with men and/or are attracted to other men since its origin. 2012 brought about two final chapters in the conclusion of the University’s direction of the future of the program. After a nearly 24 month period of re-writing the curriculum in an effort to modernize and update the model, the program was re-branded from Man2Man to become Among Men.

This change was accompanied by the adoption of Community Partners including TCMC. Community Partners are being engaged this year in an effort to move the program out from its academic research beginnings to the capable hands and implementation of community-based non-profits. Valuing how much TCMC has been able to accomplish on limited funding for such a successful period of over thirty-five years, selection of TCMC as a community partner was inevitable. The collaboration celebrates this union on October 13th & 14th, 2012 by co-hosting an event at the TCMC.

The face of HIV is changing and the way we communicate the changes is through dialog. Part of what happens at an Among Men event is dialog between men. Through sharing personal stories, we learn from one another. By learning from one another we grow. It is this growth that strengthens each of us and makes our community stronger. Please join us for the upcoming Among Men event.
