I first encountered the Twin Cities Men’s Center in the late summer of 2004, after searching for any resource that could help me in dealing with legal issues. I was seeking parenting time (I didn’t know about the term yet) to be with my estranged son who was turning one year old. After a series of bitter disappointments attempting to reconnect with him, I was turning to help. I spoke with an older man at the office, maybe it was Randy, and explained the pain I was going through. The man heard my story, then walked around the desk and without much else to say, gave me a big hug of assurance and healing support. “You don’t deserve to be left out of his life.” I nearly cried, then continued on my way, seeking various kinds of help. I was on a journey of reclaiming my fatherhood. I had already danced in spiritual ceremony for my son twice, once before he was born for a smooth healthy birth, and again that next year for his well being. He was not directly in my life, yet remained present in my thoughts, prayers, and hopes for reunion.

The following winter, at a library in a men’s “Time-Out Center” near Duluth, I picked up the book “IRON JOHN” by Robert Bly – a fortunate turn. I came to recognize that the great distance between my father and I was not unique to me, that my experience was a ripple of father yearning in a vast cultural sea of hunger and separation. My determination to “do my work” on this matter of the heart, as a vital necessity to ensure my psychic health and to underwrite any hopes of reunion with my son, lead me to many groups of conscious men, and to brilliant fellowship with individual men I’ve been fortunate enough to stumble near and create the sort of conversation that moves the energy from the heart and soul rather than the head or mind that’s busy trying to figure everything out.

Mankind Project and Boys To Men organizations helped me to see more of the shadows, and golden gifts, of father that I was carrying inside, much like light penetrating the cave of lethargic amnesia and buried treasure that only a skilled miner can create with a golden pick. My willingness to burrow deeper into the sacred wounds that my father placed, mostly unconsciously, into my being gave me the courage to work them out in the heat of community rites of passage, ritual, discussion, and grieving.

Grieving his losses, and his father’s losses before him, I finally found out who these men were. In moist moments of reconciliation, my stomach grumbles with the same hunger that they knew. I was able to forgive them, and finally myself, for not being the ideal father that a boy dreams about in his bones, and thus I broke the trance of numbness that developed in my childhood by being raised mostly by my mother, without an emotional or spiritual connection to my father.

Bly says that we need to access the “Golden Father” or sacred masculine Zeus energy in order to be complete as men, and to recover a sense of our wild nature. He says a great many other things that men ought to reconsider again and again, ingesting slowly with a keen masticating sword that can cut through our dense layers of flatness that our culture engenders to the soul of men. He quotes James Hillman with, “If a young man isn’t being seen by older men, the young man is being hurt.” Golden Father energy is like a spiritual vitamin, one that could be listed as part of the Recommended Daily Allowances of nutrients; it is food for body and soul.

Spiritual fatherhood is a journey of discovery of self, of one’s own father, and the inner one we carry inside that resonates with all the other ones in the ground. We can then find our golden father, the one that blesses us with the same power of Zeus’ lightning bolts, and life giving rainy storm, and with such soul fire, turn to our inner boy and give him what he needs: a father’s love, a celebration of our talents and gifts, and a strong supportive hand that reaches behind us to keep us propped up when we forget our power. Practice spiritual fatherhood now, and take a breath in and release this power when you give your little boy a hug, or to the next man who comes to you in a moment of pain or grief or yearning for blessing.

Greetings from the Chair

It’s an exciting time at the Twin Cities Men’s Center. Board meetings have a new energy and sense of purpose, and we are finding more men who wish to donate their time and talents to helping our mission. I’d like to use this column to tell you about some of the projects we have going, and about the board members and volunteers who are making these initiatives happen.

Several board members, including Ken Knoll, Tom Weaver, Jim Heaney, and Harry Greenberg have been presenting a PowerPoint presentation about TCMC’s offerings to treatment programs and halfway houses in the area. This is a form of outreach to populations of men who could benefit from our services. The usual response we get after a first-time presentation to an organization is, “Where have you guys been? Our clients could really use your services!” Which only reinforces the idea that for many men, TCMC has the best kept secret in the Twin Cities for the last 37 years.

The man with the steady hand on the financial rudder is Treasurer Rick Charlson. Rick delivers his monthly financial report with calm confidence and a sense of humor (ask him to tell you about TCMC’s “high interest” savings account some time.)

TCMC continues its outreach program to Minnesota’s correctional facilities. Many men, including Jim Heaney, Office Manager Randy Genrich, Dick Madigan, Tom Weaver, and others, have volunteered to participate in Transitions Fairs, in which incarcerated men who are nearing release can gather information about resources that will help them make the transition to post-incarceration life. And Bobby Schauerhame and Tommy Jones have celebrated the 10th anniversary of their Healthy Sexual Boundaries support group by writing a book titled “Choosing Healthy Sexual Boundaries: The Handbook”. The book is available at Amazon and other online retailers and makes the good work that Tommy and Bobby have done over the last decade available to a whole new audience.

New board member Damon Starks organized a board retreat in which each board member was asked to talk about issues they thought needed attention. This has resulted in a new standing board meeting agenda item that covers a “policy of the month”, and we will follow this up with another retreat in September, when we track the progress made toward achieving our goals.

Anger Management Coordinator John Hesch continues to shepherd men through our Anger Management classes, helping men deal with a common difficulty and helping to ensure TCMC’s financial stability at the same time.

Office Manager Randy Genrich is approaching 3 decades of service to TCMC. As the face of TCMC, Randy has welcomed many men to TCMC, on the phone and in person. His friendly and compassionate nature reassures men that they are in the right place to get the help they seek.

Finally, Bill Dobbs continues his quiet hard work in maintaining TCMC’s website, and in putting out Men Talk, without fail, every other month. Bill tolerates tardy submissions from contributors and last second changes to the calendar with good humor and makes sure our primary communication tool gets out. Without Bill and Scott Benson, who tirelessly maintains our databases, you wouldn’t be reading this now.

A lot of activity and a lot of good work, to be sure. And all of it aimed at helping men to help themselves and improve their lives. Does any of this sound like something you’d be interested in helping with? We are always looking for volunteers to further our mission. If you see an opportunity to help us, please contact the office or a board member and tell us how you’d like to help.

In Memorium - Harold Kallio

Long-time Men’s Center volunteer, support group facilitator, board member, Men Talk mailing party team member and men’s brunch attendee passed in mid-April after grimly enduring a progressive blood disease ending in acute myeloid leukemia.

Harold worked professionally as a mechanical engineer in quality control, most prominently at medical device companies such as Cardiac Pacemakers (later Guidant), and he was active in the American Society of Mechanical Engineers professional society. I mention this, because a minority of men who volunteer at the Men’s Center bring their unique gift of technical expertise to bear—primarily in the administrative area—thus supporting other men who specialize in the delivery of services to men. Harold compiled support group attendance reports for over a dozen years, and supported the Mac computer systems in the office in various ways.

Harold was also an early Minnesota member of the ManKind Project and participated in the New Warrior Training Adventure weekend. I got to know Harold most closely on a sailing trip on Lake Superior in the late ’90s as a fellow crew member to co-captains and warrior brothers Michael Martins and Ralph Berlovitz. My experience of Harold was that he was exceedingly kind and fair-minded, and well informed on just about any matter or subject I could engage him in.

I will miss his humor and resilience. - Andy Mickel

Please read through these various descriptions to determine which is of interest to you, and consider bringing a friend. This could be an excellent introduction to the Men’s Center for them. Each presentation is intended to foster personal growth and to stimulate interest in the topic.

Our presenters are Jill Barnes, Rasheen Tillman, Kelley Lorix, Bob Manson, Richard McLemore, Andy Mickel, Dan O’Connell, Noah Semex, and Rasheen Tillman.

A small fee is collected at the door for each person attending:

This Open Circle enables participants to witness other men practice clarity of self-expression from their hearts rather than their heads. Join us in our 5-round format and ask questions to learn more and even participate yourself if you choose. Our structure is based on the masculine archetypes of King, Warrior, Magician & Lover in Moore and Gilett’s book.

Over 50,000 men have attended Mankind Project experiential weekends for men all over the world to empower them to improve their lives and work together to help other men and families.

Mankind Project Minnesota offers two New Warrior Training Adventure weekends/year.

Anger Management Program

Have you been told that your verbal and emotional expression of anger is out of control? Have you lost your job or spouse because you “blew up” one too many times? Have you been hit with a court order to take an Anger Management Class? Learn how to manage your feelings with the Twin Cities Anger Management Program. This is one of the best, and most affordable, programs in the area. It’s ideal for men who desire to significantly improve their relationships at home and at work.

The focus of the twelve week anger management class is both education and support. Through class interaction, experiential exercises, lecture, and homework assignments, men will develop new ways to manage their feelings of anger. Following completion of the class, participants can join an ongoing support group to reinforce their new skills. These ongoing support groups will also be facilitated by the trained volunteer facilitators.

Length of Class: 12 consecutive weeks
Number of Participants: Limited to 12 men per class
Cost: $235 for TCMC Members ($250 for Non-Members)
Starting Dates: Classes are filled on a first come, first served basis. Currently, there are classes on Mondays, Thursdays, and Wednesdays.

Please call TCMC at 612-822-5892 to be placed on the waiting list. State name, address, telephone, preferred starting class. Or if you need further details, call our Anger Management coordinator, John Hesch, on the Anger Management phone 612-229-3102.
